FOREWORD

P RINT—the plaything of man, the destroyer of gods, the cradle of civilization.

As children we broke our wisdom tooth on print, chewing and digesting the hidden concepts in words. Our mentors, understanding these things better, opened the door to this new enigmatic game of blocks, of endless juxtaposition and paraphrase. Man's travail and happiness, the mysteries of the universe, the knowledge of figures, the deep-abiding understanding of art—these are but a small part of our enduring reading experience.

Now, upon graduation, we fervently return the compliment. We invite our teachers, friends, and loved ones, to share with us in the hallowed pages to follow, our joy, our growth, our memories — our PRINTED BOOK.

THE SEVEN AGES

with apologies to William Shakespeare

OUR MODERN WORLD was made by the printing press,

And we, the men and women, have benefited from the knowledge it has spewed forth.

It has meant something different to each of us and its influence on our thoughts has grown as we have grown:

At first, the infant, and the printed word meant nothing. It was not yet part of our small world.

And then the school child, learning the foundation that would allow the building of a magnificent structure of knowledge and understanding.

And then the lover, at a loss for words, longing for the beautiful, finds in books the echo of his own emotion.

Then the soldier, seeking courage and a reason for his sacrifice discovers it in the inspired writing of Aristotle and in the Bible.

The justice, crowded by the work of the day, needs the breadth and scope of literature or at the very least his newspaper to broaden his horizons to include the world.

The sixth age shifts into the man of leisure, with a wealth of precious time to reread and contemplate the philosophies of the ancients—an age rich in perspective gained through literature and experience.

Last scene of all in this strange eventful history is second childishness and mere oblivion.

But wait! There is no oblivion while there still exists a written record of life, as long as there is still a printing press to preserve, if not the body, at least the soul of the great; as long as people read . . .

DEDICATION

ADMINISTRATION

Seniors may feel that in this last phase of their high school careers they are completing a golden chapter in the Book of Life. Unfortunately, this is not so, for what has been achieved so far is really a golden preface to a rich and productive Book of Life that lies ahead. However, like all prefaces, the happy years you have spent here will establish the basis for all that follows. I sincerely wish all of you the prospect of a long-delayed conclusion.

CLASS ADVISER

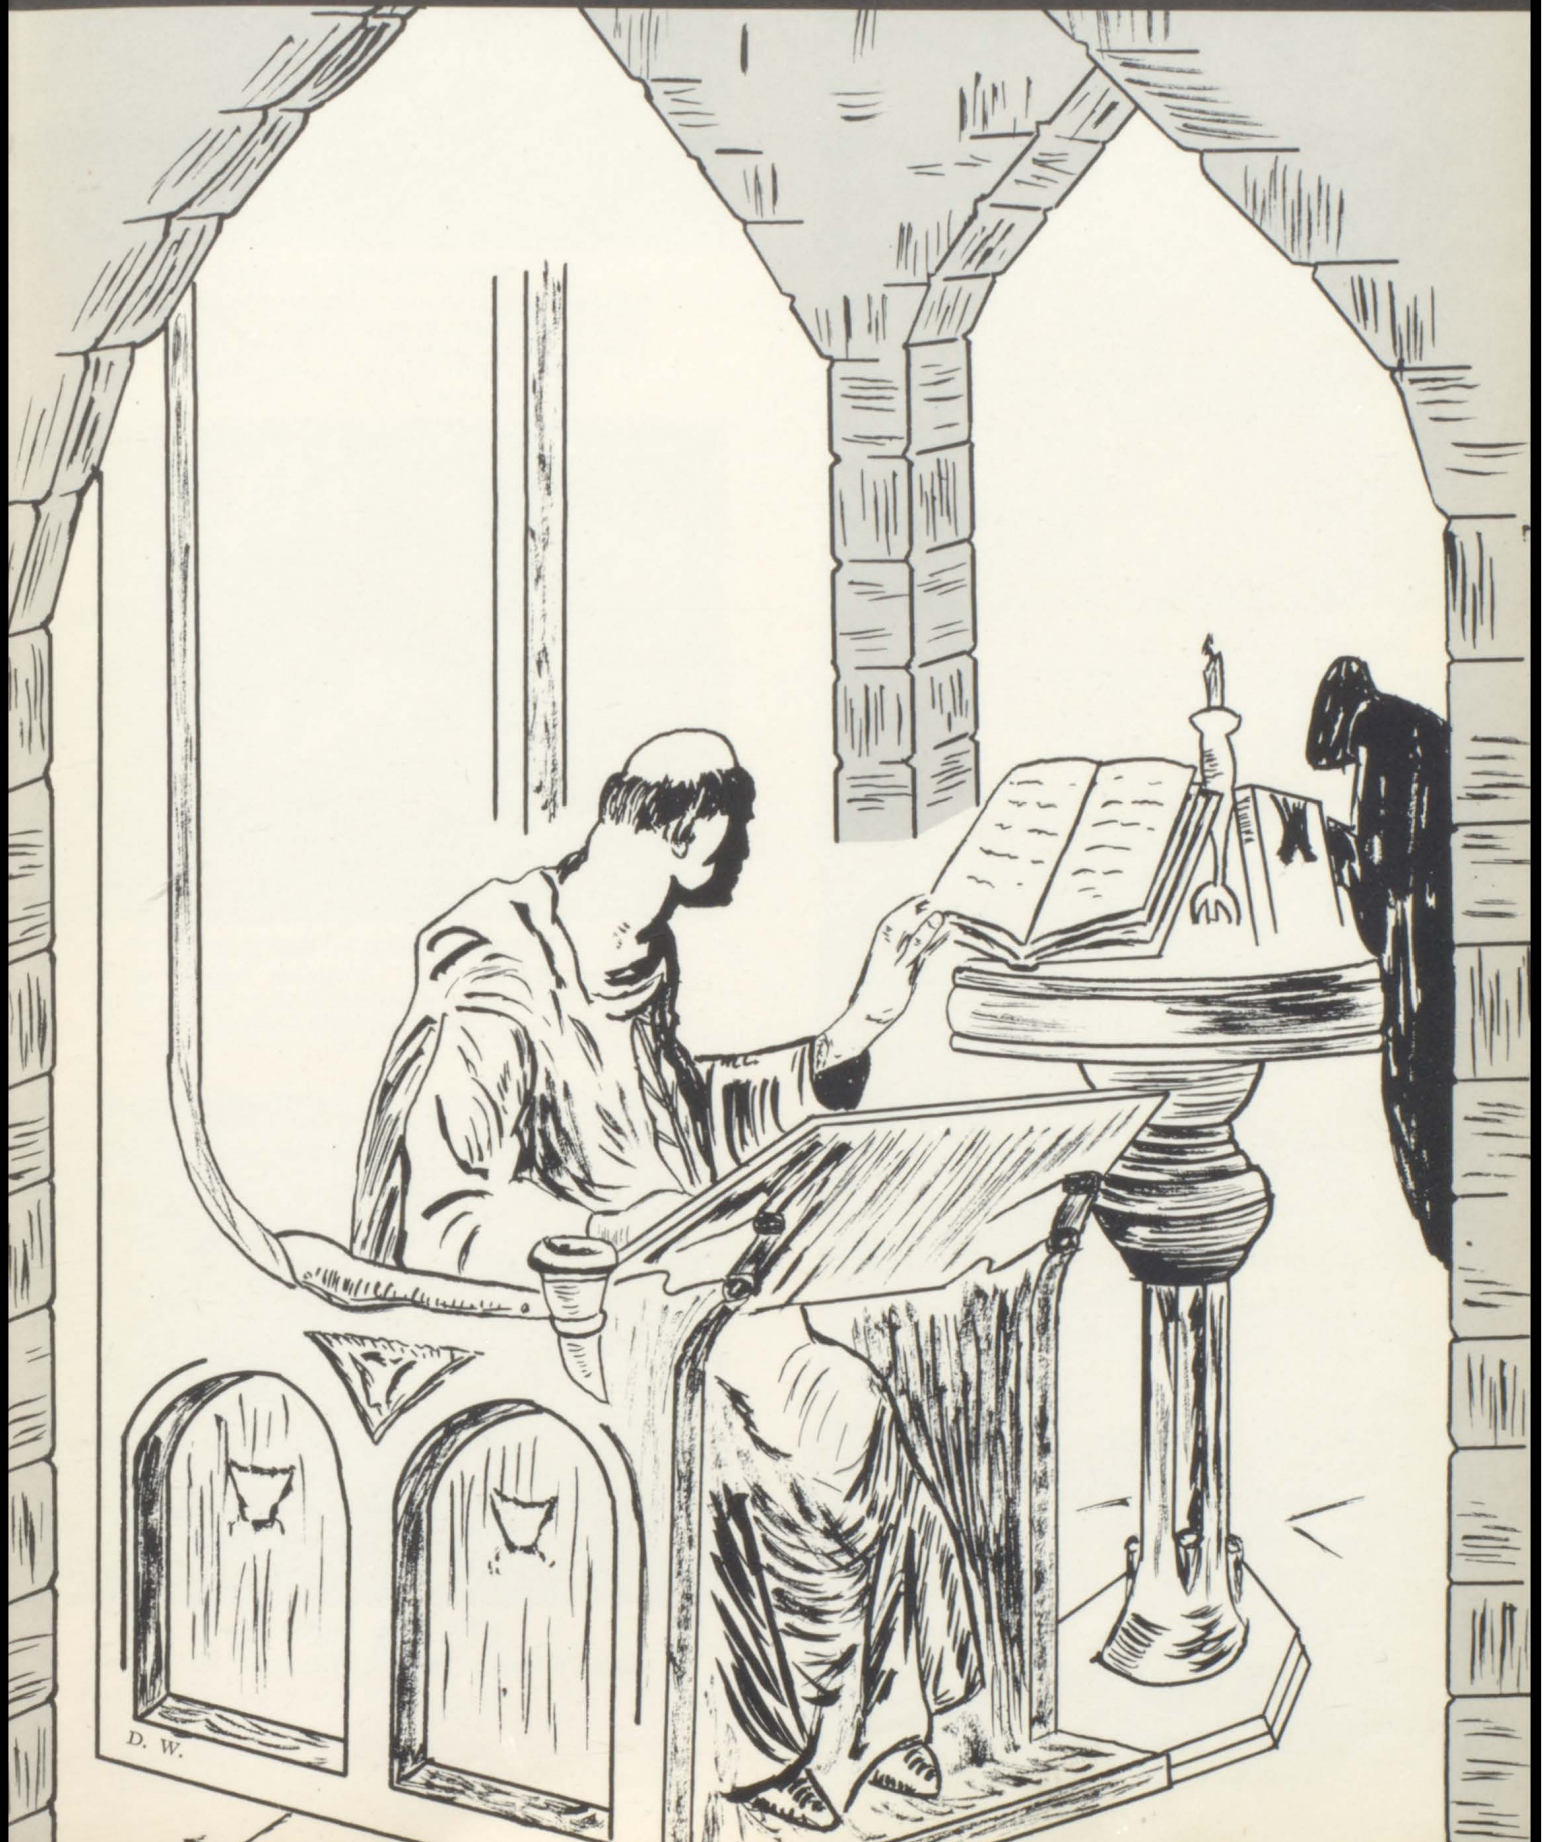

When, in February, 1954, I first addressed you as the "Class of January, 1957," those words had a strange sound. Now they have become a reality. For some of you, this reality opens the door to a bright, clear future; for others, the view is a misty, beclouded one.

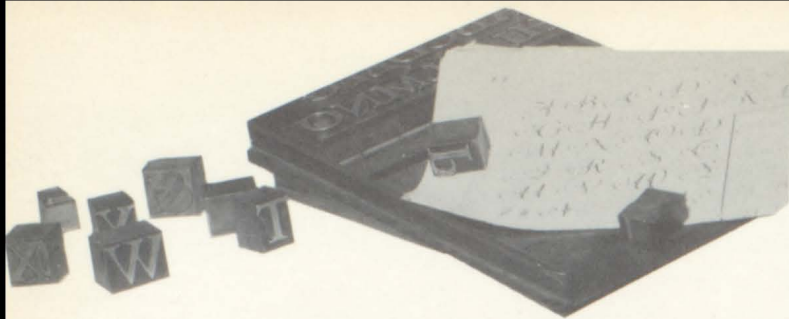

The view you see depends, in large measure, on the path you have followed here at Weequahic. Some of you have already come a long way on the road to self-discovery, but many of you are still searching for that road. Find it, I'm sure you will!

To each one of you I wish a future of health and happiness, in which your true worth will be realized both for your personal benefit and the benefit of your community.

Mrs. Hannah Litzy

Remembrance of Things Past

BEING a tale of one hundred and forty seven miscellaneous seniors, their whims, wiles, and ways — in prose and picture — during their hectic high school years of adolescence . . . Let us not forget their teachers, too.

LIFE WITH DELISI

our homeroom. It's like other homerooms in all respects save one. This is it!! It's members make no claims at being superior . . . but, then again, superior people need not make claims.

This morning, comparatively quiet due to an impending chemistry test, is still noisy enough for Mr. DeLisi's usual comment, "Class, what are you? A bunch of babies? Can't you ever keep quiet?"

A chief contributor to the confusion is Perry Trechak who heads a coterie which is presently discussing, with Marty Joel and Alan Tractenberg as the chief-dissertators, the plausibility of learning chemistry without memorizing. At about 8:10, they are joined by Rosalie Chasalow who "blindly" wants to know the products of neutralization reaction.

Also adding to the din is Bob Charles, who is giving a chem. review to Winston Brill, Stan Gulkin, and Sandy Bernstein, all of whom are "buried" in their work. The trio of Matty Rice, Lew Polk, and Alan Goldberg are reviewing too, but what they're studying isn't chemistry.

In the back of the room, a particularly noisy group is discussing the Prom's decorations. Carolyn Lieb, the committee's chairman, is all for a Spectacular while Janice Allison and Margie Kolakowski are for something along the lines of "My Fair Lady." Opposing them all is Dot Jackson, who wants something "hip."

At this point, Marty Hoffman, the class chairman, rises in an attempt to quiet the noisy ones. Surprisingly enough, things do begin to calm down—to a low roar.

Joe Berke, our banker, shouts his plea, "Does anyone want to bank?" Apparently not!

Barry Grossbach, seeing Frances Letzter—to whom he owes a dime for the Calumet—, takes off for parts unknown. At this time, Roberta Saunders is struggling to count heads, "for the record." Needless to say, she is having a rough time of it.

Helping each other out are Val Lowitz and Fred Mantel, who are scratching each other's back, one of the few quiet pastimes enjoyed by the class. Another serene couple are Herb Lutsky, who is dreaming of the last good bowling score, and Sandy Greenwald, who is trying to figure a "perfect" cover for the Legend.

Harvey "The Rock" Weisslitz, our New York Times salesman, delivers the paper to Harry Spain, who wonders why he even bought the thing . . . especially since it doesn't have comics!

It's almost 8:30 now, and a few of our classmates are still at large. One of the missing, Barbara Rosenthal, now struts into the room. Gary Miller, another absentee, follows in behind her, still rubbing the sand from his eyes.

Mary Mihalko and Judy Kessler are perhaps the quietest in the class, for they're dreaming of when they'll be free. It's a saddening thought!!

I AM THE WORLD.

I am a little world inhabited by thirty people and one unique Don George Martino. Have pity on me for I am dying. Life is ebbing from me; my people are leaving. I seem to keep turning in circles. Perhaps if I think of the past, my heart would pulsate with the firmness of youth. All the days of my life were the same; yet, all were different.

Always, Don Martino crosses my border at eight twenty. On his heels is Jerry Swanger, whose duty it is to warm all the seats. Phil Greenspun arrives and opens his briefcase. He is closely watched by Murry Goldman. Others enter and soon my world is full but for one. Oh, here she comes. Majorette Andi Poshkin struts into the room, twirling a comb through her pony tail. All are present.

Small I may be, yet it takes lots of effort and energy to run me smoothly. My two chairmen, Lew Spellman and Toby Hinkes, make sure that all announcements concerning Honor Society are not read while Secretaries Harriet Zahn and Naomi Geltzeiler see that the ruler is in readiness for Don Martino. Meanwhile, back in the universe, Barry Glicken tries to explain why we never get our Calumets. Financier Irwin Leibowitz, our baseball hero, with his assistant Linda Orlans, collects banking money. According to Don Martino's rules and regulations, the prayer must be said. The strongest voices heard are those of football players Nick LaBruno, Billy Levine, Alan Kesselhaut and Bruce Bardack.

Money, money, where does it go to? It all goes to Iris Wakstein who is chief tax collector of my world. Mike Kasen is improving in lip reading for he has no trouble in understanding S. R.'s mouthed words. Joyce Kaufman is singing the praises of her newest to cheerleader and class Secretary Bobbie Kowalsky, who is screaming for the homework. She's in luck for Sue Blum has taken time out from shopping to do it. Richie Segal and Mike Rawitz have been trapped by Sandy Salz. He's batting his gums about basketball so they'll never get away. Boyfriends and acting are under discussion by Sandee Liebowitz and Diane Kastner, who can't interest Joanie Marienthal at all. Above the babble, we hear Arlene Diamond playfully tell Don Kaufman, "Don't make me crazy, you hear?" He doesn't. He's too busy writing an excuse for his last absence. Don Martino bangs his ruler for silence. He very politely demands that Linda Marion shut up. His wish is Linda's command. Everyone is quiet now, for they take no chances on Don Martino's temper. After all, he might ask them to stay for detention. The bell rings and Mary Ann Derebin bolts for the door. The last thing I hear is the Don saying, "Don't you 'keeds' know any rules and regulations? Detention for EVERYBODY." Poor me.

I am the world. I am dying. Have pity on me. Life is ebbing from me and my people are leaving. Even with my dying breath, I thank my inhabitants for making me "The Perfect Little World of Don Martino."

GOOD MORNING, MRS. WATTS

OUR CLASS is a substantial cross-section of the student body who don't particularly care about homeroom; and, that's all right, because it means that their actions are their own, not starched or altered by the conventionality of the classroom. Mrs. Watts, however, wishes they would conform just a bit.

The homeroom period is virtually the only unchanging facet of our high school lives. Because the individual quality of ourselves has been elaborated, the friendships given of ourselves have been honest and the dislikes fair.

My name is Toby Geltman and I share the official duty of class counselor with Dave VanPoznak, who attempts to collect the money while I struggle over the early morning confusion to make announcements. Rose Balsamo, our chairman, and Gwen Neals arrive early but fill, until overflowing, the time with talk about their Army and Navy boyfriends, respectively. Phyllis Gruber, not wanting to be left out, gives a rousing rendition of her own class song, sung to the tune of "Are You From Dixie?" The "music," however, is toned down by Wilma Grunt, Cynthia Major, Phyllis Trome, and Barbara Yellin who are trying to finish reading The New York Times by the bell.

Our athletes are Arnold Rudominer, the blond basketball whiz, and Mel Krafsky, a courageous boy who plays football. Jerry Fleischer's track skill is always in evidence as he whips into the room with the bell—and Marsha Lechter, who is not in that much of a hurry.

After Lois Horn takes the attendance, the mass migration takes place. Robert Fox, Norman Rothstein, and Arnie Slifer gather around Carmine Villano's desk to discuss the '57 transmissions and why they can't afford them. There is also a shift to the back near the desks of Lois Lasky and Gloria Schmerel whose brand new blond hair and old dates are being compared.

Those, however, who are quite impervious to these "spheres of influence" are Mary Scherer who furthers her art ability by doodling on yesterday's homework; Betsy Sternberg—she's thinking about her recent trip to Israel—, and Aaron Lehman who simply reads his chemistry book.

Speaking of that controversial subject; Myrna Hymanson and Myra Ordower are our most avid "anti-acids" fans. Their mixture of hate and disgust is artful.

Perhaps the most interesting conversations are those which take place in the southwest corner. Jerry Diamond is first up with a rattling attack on school rules and cut slips. He is responded to most "appropriately" by Murray Kravitz with some garble about red convertibles, his girl friend, and a vegetable garden, a melange which has hardly concluded when Myron Schnittlich, using some colorful adjectives, extols the glory of the Brooklyn Bums to Irwin Korn who does not reply but merely asks for the money he won on the Series.

As I said, we are not altered by convention . . .

CAPTAIN HORATIO GERARD

IF YOU happen to be on the third floor early in the morning, you might notice the commotion outside Homeroom 305. If so, it is only Manny Gerstein trying to force open the locked door, while Ernie Schnitzer and Stanley Goldstein desperately try to pull him away. Mr. Gerard arrives none too soon for the door looks as if it will give way any minute.

The bell rings and the ten minutes of organized confusion begins. The first thing you notice is that Robert Appel has his hair combed; and, while you stand there in surprise, Allen Goorwitz rushes in. He is trying to give out the New York Times and at the same time deliver a speech to thank the class for electing him Vice President. The homeroom chairman, Enid Warshawsky, breaks in at this point and begins repeating the notices for the third time. She is not heard, however, because Norbert Belfer, ignoring Fred Morgner's signal to sit down so the attendance can be taken, has already begun to read the Bible at the top of his lungs. All of a sudden, there comes a burst of laughter from the back of the room.

What else could it be but that Harry Goldstein giving another of his imitations of Elvis Presley's bumps and grinds. Alvin Becker starts to clap and soon everyone is banging on the desk in time to Harry's grunts and groans. This nonsense, however, stops when we see that Angela Carracino has swooned. Her fall is broken by Mike Klein, who fortunately was standing near her desk, eyeing the sports jobs from the window. Sheila Rudnick, meanwhile, is trying to get the history homework from Renee Sanders, who hasn't done it either. In desperation they ask Sandy Richman if she knows the publisher of the Star Ledger. She doesn't; but, all is not lost for Seymour Geldzahler reveals his clever scheme for remembering history. Pat Byrne, who just skipped into the graduating class, watches the scene with awe.

To add to the confusion, Gladys Feldman suddenly realizes she forgot her gym suit and begins to scream, "Gym, Gym." Hearing this, Dave Wakstein, her steady, turns his head and screams furiously, "Who the heck is Jim?!" Harvey Wishman, our revered Treasurer, seeing the homeroom sweathearts in an argument, rushes over to change the subject and deliver an impromptu lecture on how "two can live as cheap as one."

Arlene Schwartz, Marilyn Telesnick, and Myrna Steinberg are all around Susan Horn's desk trying to convince her that their candid shots are clear enough for the yearbook. Arthur Warner saunters over to the girls and dramatically informs them that unless they bring in their two dollar ads, there won't be any yearbook. Billy Luper looks as if he'd like to say something about the two dollar ads not growing on trees, but his ridiculous grin remains plastered across his face, no words forthcoming, whence Albert Yablonsky yells that the bell has rung. Who could tell for sure with all the noise?

Stephen Tollin points out that the clock says 8:40 so there is a mad rush for the door. Gerald Weiss stops behind long enough to see Mr. Gerard remove the cotton from his ears. Bedlam is finis another morning.

LOOK HOMEWARD, HAMPLE

The room at the end of the second floor corridor slowly begins to fill up. It's Monday morning, and the residents of 207 are bursting with enthusiasm to begin another week of learning under the guidance of our disciplinarian, Miss Hample. We mean bursting, literally, for, class does not officially begin until Susan Braff and Barbara Brodtkin crash through our sound barrier, arriving simultaneously with the 8:30 bell.

Our stalwart chairman, Phyllis Klein, makes a valiant effort to read the day's notices, but in vain. And poor Deanna Kaiser has marked seven people absent who don't even belong in the homeroom. A loud guffaw from the back of the room indicates that Kenny Fink has told Don Whitmeyer about the great virtues and strict discipline of the United States Army, while at the same time, Susanne Newman desperately roller-skates around the room in a vain search for the purchasers of the New York Times. The reason for the disappearance? Harriet Brenner and Ticha Diamond have slipped underneath their desks to read the latest issue of "Modern Romances" and Renee Friedman is fast asleep in the back of the room.

Doing a buck and wing through our honored portal we catch a glimpse of George Rinehart, who has left from the water fountain to join the buzz of activity inside the room. And buzz it is! Elaine Cohen, trying to persuade her indifferent classmates that the Calumet is a worthwhile investment, is aided by Leonore Benedik, who is lauding the merits of having a bank account rather than squandering our pennies on space suits and monkey bars.

There was a class council meeting yesterday, so we hear a rather loud plea from representative Larry Wasserman as to whether our graduation robes should be green or yellow. We see from a show of hands that Jacqueline Rose and Barbara McGuire prefer pink. A suggestion is raised by Sheila Pollick to hold our graduation in Untermann Field; but, it is vetoed by Elizabeth Favers, who reminds us that the noise of snow plows would probably drown out Mr. Bernstein's words of wisdom.

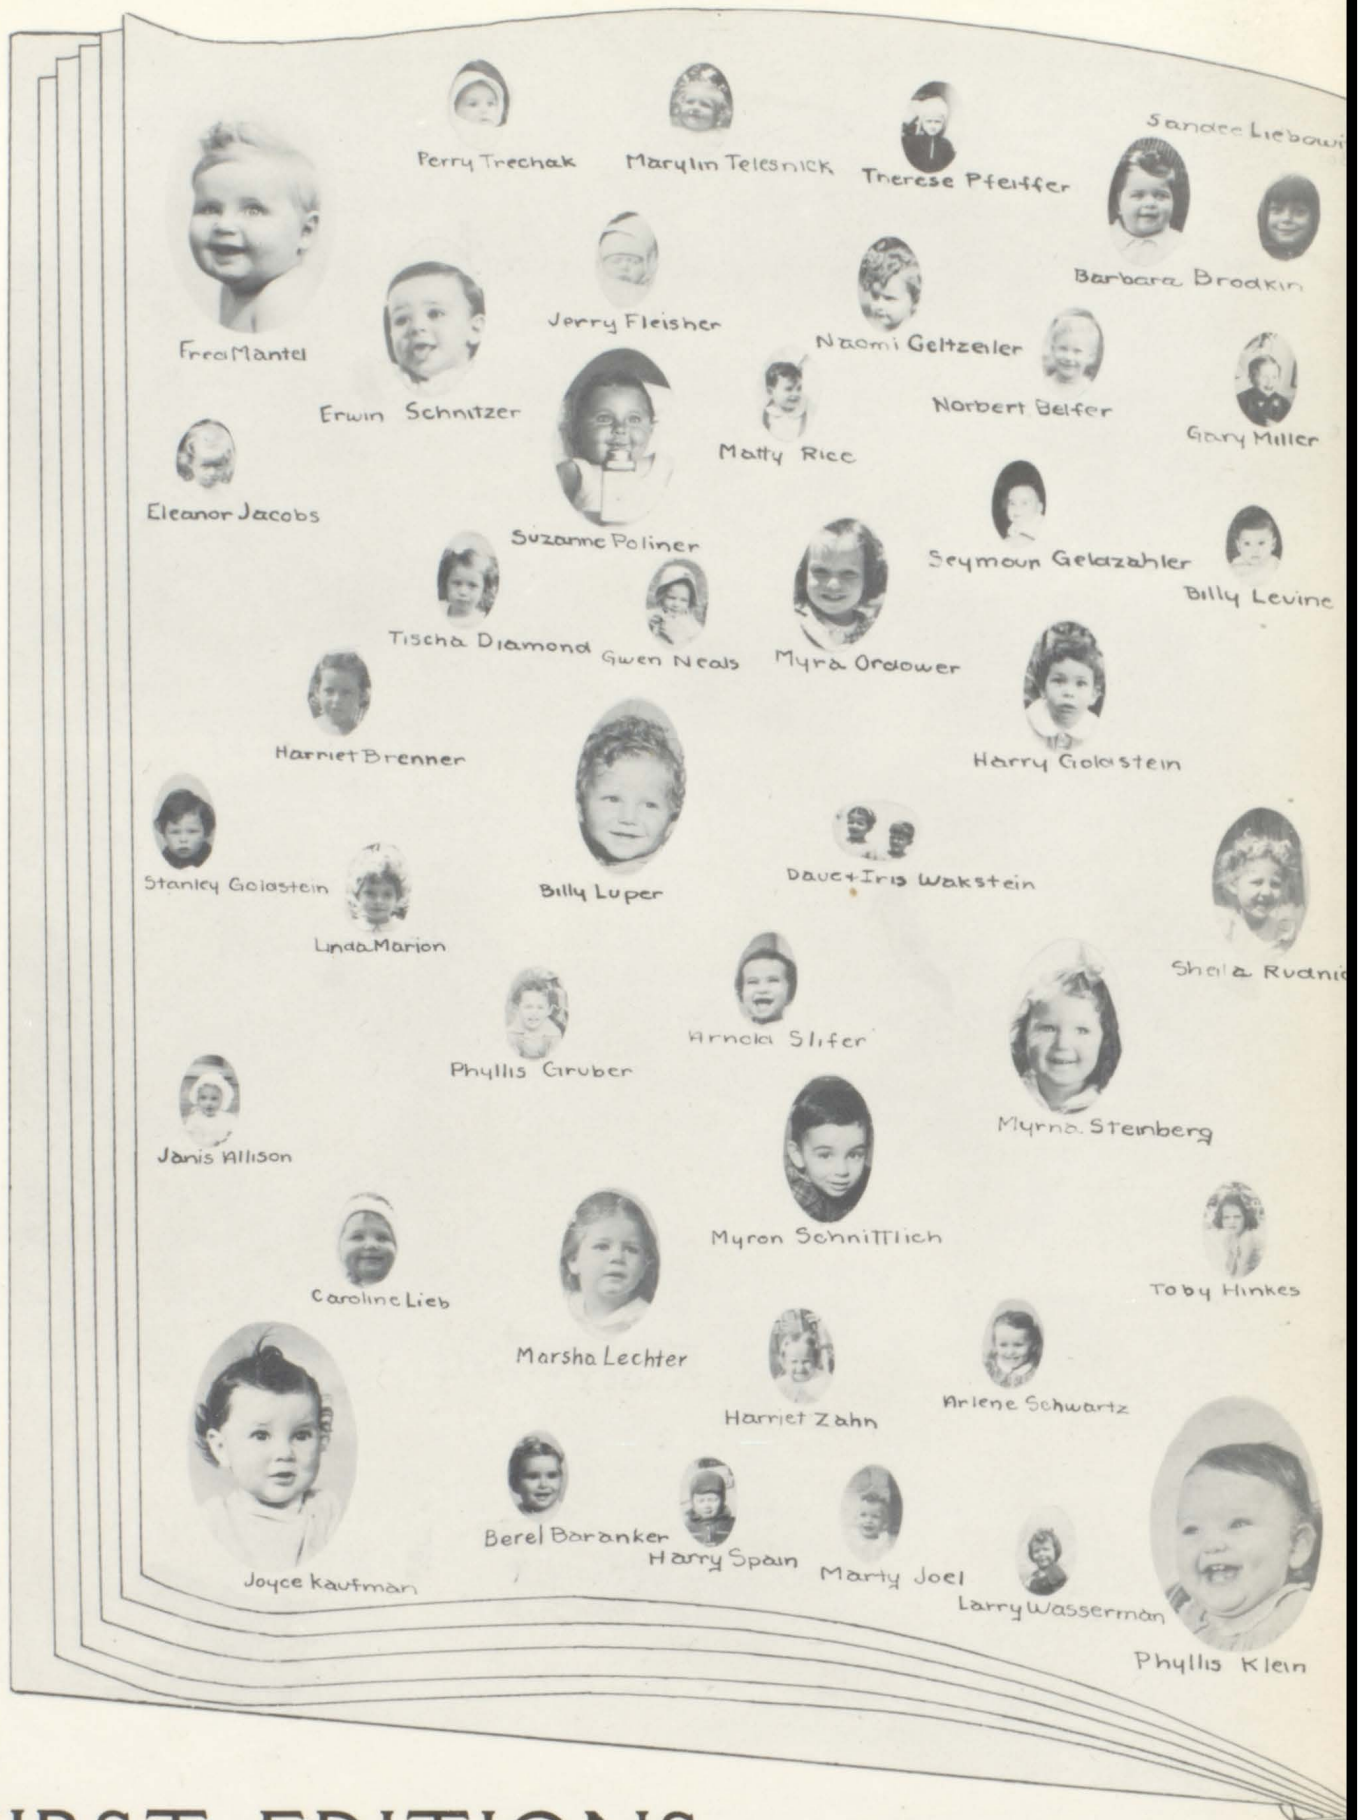

Another speaker? Ah, yes, it is our Legend representative, Eleanor Jacobs, asking for our baby pictures. A protest arises from Bob Epstein, who maintains he was never a baby. He is shouted down, however, by Maxine Kepniss and Therese Pfeiffer who believe otherwise.

We see Shirley Kaufman at the blackboard informing us that we have only 54 more "daz" until graduation, while our sentimentalist, Barbara Kravitz, sheds a tear at the thought of leaving dear alma mater so soon.

From across the room, Deena Pomp "whispers" to Beryl Baranker one of the details of the past weekend she had forgotten to mention in her six hour oratory, while Marlene Bisk complains of a light in her eyes. Relax Marlene; it is only the reflection from the ever-present mirror in pretty Barbara Cohen's hand.

Maria Aponte is seen explaining the principles of advanced calculus to our carrot-top, Barbara Sidel, when the 8:45 bell rings, and we stagger through the "uncongested" stairways and venture to our first period classes, knowing full well that the experiences we share in Homeroom 207 will long be remembered . . .

THE WEEQUAHIC PRIMER

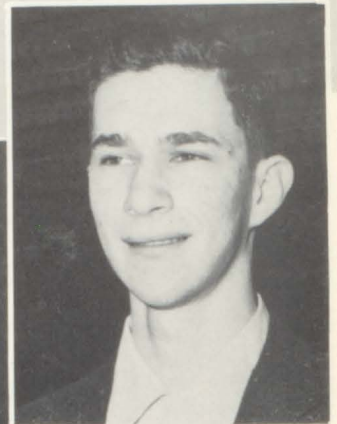

We entered the Annex.
Strange contents in new Books.
Our social life was Canteen.
Dancing to records too few played too often.
We joined Every Club.
Football was part of the new life.
We Grew out of the little Wigwam.
To enter the white building was Happiness.
There were Icy stares.
It was a Joke to think it easy.
The Key to belonging was yet to be earned.
Junior year! Another rung of the Ladder.
More importance, greater responsibilities.
New sophomores and they are our pawns.
We elected Officers and had a picnic.
We were now Prone to think.
Questions and answers at our Class Council.
Activities become Routine.
The climax was our Square dance.
The Torch was passed, a symbol of our seniority.
How Useful have our four years been?
4B-4A basketball game—senior play were Various pleasures.
Our days at Weequahic—soon to be memories.
When Xmas arrives can graduation be far behind?
Yesterdays forgotten, graduation and job loom ahead.
But Zenith is commencement.

Curtain Time

An eye peeps through the curtain. A sea of nothingness wells up before the eye and coldly greets it. An unseen enemy creeps under the curtain and clutches all in a stranglehold. That enemy is nervousness. Director De Lisi fights the dark obscure figure with a pep talk which soothes jangled nerves. He gathers cast and crew alike in an embrace of encouragement, then hides behind the set, head in hands, hoping for the best. For he too understands that an audience is that most terrifying, critical, yet wonderful people.

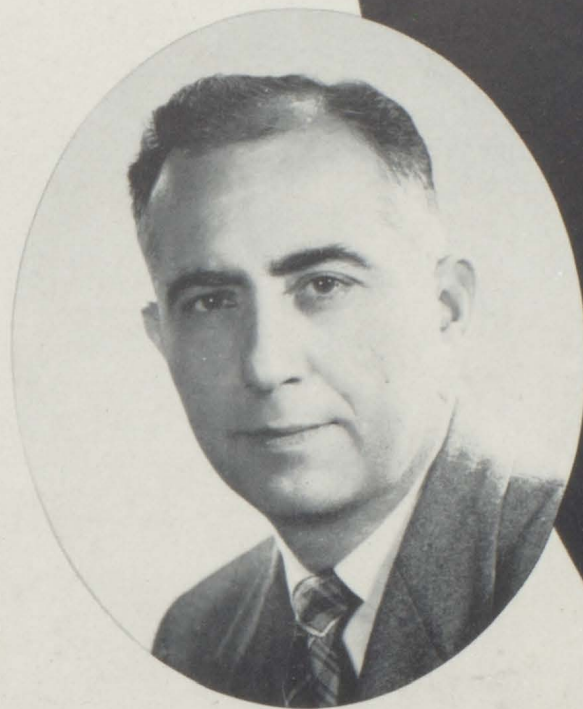

Finally the velvet is separated, the stage set, the world quiet. What do actors think at this moment?

"What is the first line? Oh yes, now we remember. If these people don't laugh, we'll die. We can't see a thing. Where in the world are our parents? Rehearsals were never like this. Maybe someone backstage has a piece of gum. Our mouths are so dry we can't even swallow. What are they all staring at? Well, here goes everything."

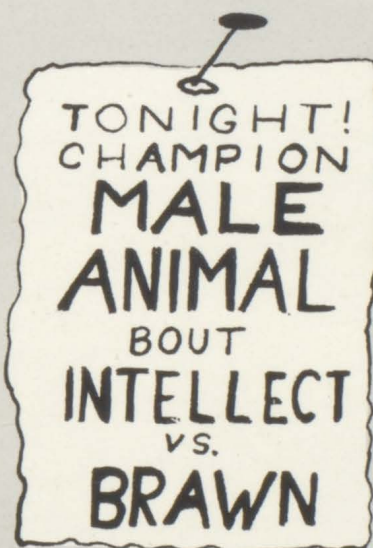

Thus are actors' hearts and souls laid bare. And when the play is over, what then? The audience has gone. They have laughed and enjoyed themselves for one evening. But as for us, we have smelled the delicious odor of greasepaint, known the joy of giving life to a character who has none, seen the look of pride on our director's face, felt closeness of cast for one prolonged moment, and won the applause of the most wonderful audience, ever. Yes, they've gone home. They are happy but they'll forget. Never shall we

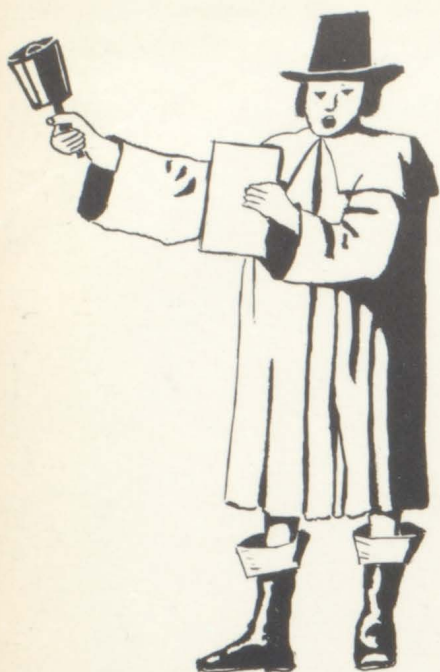

On the evenings of December 16 and 17, 1953, Weequahic High presented the first Annex play in our school's history. It was "Growing Pains" and featured Irwin Leibowitz as George McIntyre, in the awkward age; Sandee Liebowitz as Mrs. McIntyre, an understanding mother; Marlene Bisk as Mrs. Patterson, a snoopy neighbor; Betsy Sternberg as Elsie Patterson, her boy-crazy daughter; Erwin Schnitzer as Brian, a romantic young man; David Van Poznak as a not-so-romantic young man; and Linda Orlans as Patty, a doll of a friend.

In the spring of April 27 and 28, 1956, our school was to next stage "The Male Animal," a departure from the typical high school production. Its cast included Linda Orlans as Patricia Stanley, Harvey Wishman as Wally Meyers, David Van Pozmak as Dean Frederick Damon, Diane Kastner as Cleota, and Betsy Sternberg as Myrtle Keller. The two plays were directed by Mr. Frank De Lisi.

BACK FILES

Wide-eyed and enthusiastic, we entered the Annex, plunging ourselves completely into an ocean of subjects and activities. It didn't take us long to acclimate ourselves and find the road on which we would travel in the next four years. The highlight of our first term at the Annex was the Spring Prom in June. Later we established the function of the Freshman Play, growing theatrically with "Growing Pains." Thus, leaving our mark in the Annex, we ventured forth to bigger and better accomplishments.

Entering the main building to begin our sophomore term was like emerging from a small hut to an exquisite mansion. Vibrant with energy and the grand feeling that we knew everything, we ventured forth on this course of higher learning. There were some disillusionments; we found no swimming pool, no parking lot, and some of us are still in search of the fourth floor. But we held out and now scars were left on us.

Came our Junior year and we had our first opportunity to assert our sense of belonging. We held our first election, putting into office those we felt most capable to lead us. As Juniors we initiated a 3B event; came June and the highlight of the school year was our picnic and the beginning of our closeness as a class. We swam and played baseball in Rahway Park, the beautiful setting for our picnic. As 3A's we held a Square Dance and around a scarecrow and several chickens, we danced the Virginia Reel. The Junior year was now quickly diminishing.

At last! The culmination of a four year old dream: we were the infallible omniscient seniors. In March we voted for a revival of the 3A-4B play, and some of our most inspired Brandos and Magnanis, ventured forth to dip their talents in the "Male Animal." In quick order followed our resplendent 4B Hop, "Rhythm in the Moonlight," the ever memorable June Torch Day ceremony, and at last, our pinnacle, 4A.

We quickly set up preparations for the all-important 4A elections and chose to lead us four able members of our class: Martin Hoffman, Allen Goorwitz, Barbara Kowalsky and Harvey Wishman. It didn't seem strange to see Mr. La Penna's office habitually crowded with perspective college students weighed down with transcripts and applications. Amid this hubbub, we made plans for the 4B-4A basketball game, from which we emerged victorious. Our Legend Staff was set up under the supervision and guidance of our adviser, Mr. David Stamelman and our editor-in-chief, Sandra Greenwald. A unanimous vote decided that "Printing and Books" would be our theme. Next we were faced with the enormous task of preparing for "The Lovliest Night of the Year," our Prom, and to make it so, we held it in the loveliest place of all, the Clinton Manor. Still groggy from the Prom week-end, we went ahead with the beautiful solemn ceremony of Torch Day, held on January 11. There lay before us only the exciting and awesome ceremony of Graduation. Thrilled, yet apprehensive, we awaited the great day, and when the thirtieth of January finally arrived, a more nervous and excited group of individuals couldn't be found anywhere. Inspired by the words of Mr. Bernstein and of our valedictorians, Susan Horn and Joseph Berke, we completed our four years at Weequahic High School and were ready to travel on the roads of our futures, some to school, some to work, all, we hope, to happiness.

Wherein is contained the last will and testament.

- To MR. BERNSTEIN: We leave a part of the auditorium, set aside for one of the principal's "Only For Seniors" talks.
- To MR. MARTINO: We leave a class of straight "A" keeds.
- To THE GYM DEPARTMENT: A shorter mile track.
- To DR. RANUCCI: We leave a set of "beautiful" squares and circles.
- To THE LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT: A plea for more French and Less "Greek."
- To THE SENIOR B's: We leave our history notes, chem labs, English book reports, and all our other "F" papers.
- To THE SCIENCE DEPARTMENT: We leave our acid-eaten, torn, pencil-written, unnamed, and rejected labs.
- To MISS O'CONNOR: A set of buttons which can be pinned on "dullards" saying "sparkle please."
- To THE LUNCH ROOM: We leave Syd's hot dogs (with the works.)
- To THE HISTORY DEPARTMENT: A chair in which George Washington once wished he could sit in.
- To THE FRESHMEN: A book entitled "Chance for Survival in Weequahic."
- To MR. GOLDBERG: The answers to the next College Board test.
- To MRS. TWARDUS: We leave a memo pad, so that her assignments will agree with ours.
- To MR. EPSTEIN: We leave a set of beautifully covered science books.
- To THE GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT: We leave a college in the South Pole for those students who want to get away from it.
- To MR. D. STAMELMAN: We leave the theme "Food and the Supermarket" for the next "Legend" staff.
- To THE TEACHERS WHO NEVER HAD ANY STUDENTS FROM OUR CLASS: Five extra years of life.
- To MRS. LITZKY: We leave all of our problems, hoping that she will write a book about them.
- To THE JANITORS: Wider waste-paper baskets so that when students throw papers they have a better chance of making a "basket."
- AND, IN CONCLUSION, TO OUR ALMA MATER: Our loves, our dreams, our hopes, our rebellion, for they are such things as maturing young men and women are made of.

In the future, one may look back and relive the athletic history of his graduating class.

The object of the greatest import will not be the final scores, but the manner in which the events were played.

Everyone likes his team to be victorious. However, it is the competitive spirit that is the backbone of our American heritage. The won and lost record of a team is not the yardstick by which the success of an athletic team should be measured. Sportsmanship and fair play are the true standards of accomplishment.

In the following pages the class of January, 1957, reviews in picture word the history of its senior athletics and their teams.

← The school, and every member of the graduating class in particular, will long remember our athletes and their exploits on the field of battle. Their sense of sportsmanship makes us very proud of them.

On The Gridiron

Sure, winning the football game is good; however, the talents of material and experience provide such results. When these essentials are not present, we can only hope for the best and trust that our boys will be fighting hard on the field and — though against all odds — giving their best at all times, trying to bring victory to the school.

Such is the case with our squad, the nucleus wherein lies several members of this graduating class. Whereas triumph and glory have not always prevailed, determination and perserverance have, throughout. Alan Goldberg and Nick LaBruno, two-letter men, are but two examples of the spirit and heart of the team: Alan, despite serious injuries in the past three seasons, remained an important man on the line in this, his last year. Nick, injured and on crutches earlier in the season, had recovered and was back in his backfield post.

Strong man Fred Morgner, despite an ankle injury, has played commendable ball at end and tackle positions in his two varsity seasons. Veterans Mel Krafsky, Billy Levine — who, by the way, gained second team honors for All-City competition — and Alan Kesselhaut, played spirited ball, holding down their tackle, guard, and end slots, respectively.

Alan Goldberg, after seeing brief action as a junior, has turned in a remarkable effort as a crashing defensive lineman, responsible for a good margin of our tackles. A valuable man in the safety and punting spots for the past two years has been Harry Goldstein. Lastly, the rookie varsity duo of Barry Glicken, lineman, and Bruce Bardak, back, have done an able job at their posts.

Yes, we do have a football team; and, it's a courageous and willing one, too. We in Weequahic — and those of us about to leave the school — know that they have always wanted to win. Whether they have or not — they went out for the team and we're proud of them.

REVIEW

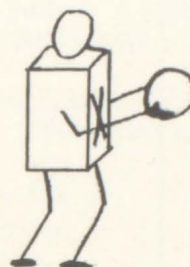

On The Court

The 1956-57 season promised to be an outstanding one. Our cagers, led by Sandy Salz and Arnold Rudominer, were rated as pre-season favorites to capture the coveted City League diadem.

Salz, who started at center in his junior year, is a 6 feet, 2 inch, 170 lbs. competitor who averaged 15 points per game in the 1955-56 cage season. Gifted with extraordinary speed for a "big man," Sandy capitalized by countering on a wide variety of shots, taken from any angle. His rebounding was a major factor in the showing of the Indians, and his 29 points against South Side was a road-game high mark.

The other half of this high scoring and competitive duo is Arnold Rudominer. Standing 6 feet even, "Rudy," noted for his incredibly soft and accurate touch on his one hander, holds the school scoring record. He poured 33 points through the hoop against Perth Amboy on route to tying Salz as the team's high scorer. Both boys were mentioned on the All-City Selection of 1955-56.

These two veterans were counted upon to spark the Indians, coached by Lester Fein, to their best season since 1947-48. Having played together since grammar school, Sandy and Rudy were undoubtedly the key to unlocking the City League Treasure Room.

4B-4A Basketball Game

Originated by the graduated class of June, 1956 and the present class of January, 1957 about to leave, the 4B-4A basketball game has now developed into an anxiously awaited semi-annual event. By its growing popularity, Weequahic now has its first true intra-mural athletic contest; in addition, the affair, which has brought the student body closer together, has also promoted spirit for the school, which is needed at all times.

Though the senior game is but a year in existence, a precedent has already been formed: the Senior A class, twice in succession, has copped winning honors. The first game, played in May, saw the June '56 squad nose out the present Senior A boys. This year, in November, the January '57 team withstood a rally to win, 50-41. However, no matter what the score in these games and in the games to come, the 4B-4A game has brightened up the spirit for athletics and has promoted fine sportsmanship here at Weequahic. These are the important things and we, the graduating class of January 1957, are pleased to have serviced our school in some way before our exiting.

Rudominer, Salz

On The Diamond

Members of our graduating class figured prominently in the fine showing of our baseball team over the past two years. Billy Luper, Myron Schnittlich, Irwin Leibowitz, and Lew Spellman were members of the 1955 squad that brought Weequahic its first baseball City Championship.

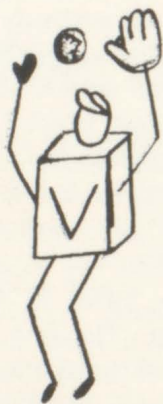

Billy Luper played centerfield and was lead-off batter on the title-winning club, also being a quick and dangerous man on the basepaths, leading the club in stolen bases. For his talents, Billy was mentioned for All-City honors.

Versatile Irwin Leibowitz contributed to the team in the outfield, second base and first base. He was a four year veteran of the Indians' nine.

Myron Schnittlich, during spring training of '55, led the team in batting percentage. In his senior year, My was shifted from shortstop to the outfield, proving himself an agile and capable performer at any position.

Lew Spellman, after winning a starting berth in the outfield, injured his knee in the last practice game before the regular season's opener. He came back, however, to finish the season in left field.

As you can see, we — the graduating class of January 1957 — have contributed greatly in baseball and have left lasting memories.

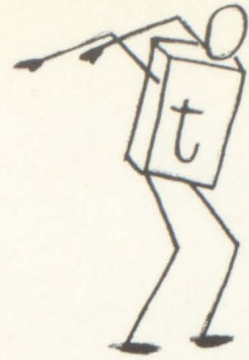

BASEBALL

Leibowitz, Schnittlich, Spellman

On The Water

Running a winning streak of 29 straight dual meets, our mermen swam to the City Meet title for the first time in four years. Harry Goldstein aided the cause, taking a third place medal in the 40 yard sprint and placing fourth in the 100 yard sprint.

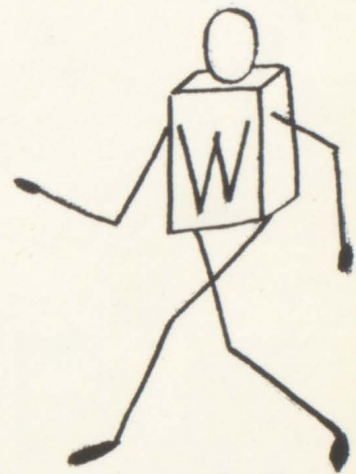

On Track and Dale

The quality of our athletes far surpassed the quantity in the running sports, track and cross country, in which members of our graduating class, January 1957, excelled. Behind the leadership of co-captain Jerry Fleischer, our distance harriers brought home the City Championship to Weequahic for the first time in over twenty years.

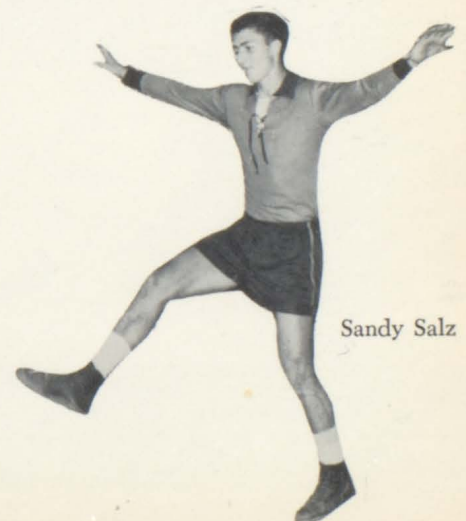

Switching to track, Sandy Salz ran the half mile and took many firsts in dual and triangular meets. Jerry Fleischer, again, showed fine form as a miler. Harry Goldstein, after a fine season, placed in the 180 yard low hurdles at the city meet. Harry also competed in the broadjump event this year. Herb Lutzky, a rookie in his senior year, placed in the 100 yard dash at the city meet.

All of the above-mentioned players combined to make their last running year at Weequahic a successful one for themselves and for the school.

On The Field

Our soccer team, playing against opposition in this, their second year in existence, more than held their own, beating Irvington Tech and Hillside in the process. Sandy Salz, the lone member of the present graduating class competing, played fine defensive ball as goalkeeper for the Indian booters, a valuable asset to the squad.
